

JV Football Theory

By Gregory Hunter, Class of 2011

There are possibly fifty individuals on a football team. Twenty-two of these individuals start; eleven on offense and eleven on defense. But only one team will win the game.

The difference between winning and losing is the ability to perform error-free. The losing team only has the option of learning from its errors to become the winning team in the next game.

The Junior Varsity football team currently has four losses and no wins. But an inspiration the JV players are keeping in mind is the quote "A man can fall down six times but stand up seven times."

The JV football team is not meeting the success it had hoped for. But the theory of Coach White and the players is that this is a learning experience.

The team is learning from its errors. With the elimination of these errors, and the determination to stand back up, the JV football players will be a winning team sometime soon.
